The Headquarters Building Expansion

Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2010/11/17 : CIA-RDP88G00186R000800930001-5

The Headquarters Building Expansion

Expansion of the Headquarters Building of the Central Intelligence Agency will provide space to consolidate approximately 3,000 employees from the Washington metropolitan area. The new facilities include a 1.1 million square foot multipurpose building, a 2,500-car parking deck, and two security checkpoints.

The multipurpose facility, consisting of both office and equipment space, is being constructed west of the existing cafeteria and will connect to the existing building at the ground and first floors. The ground floor connections are adjacent to the new loading docks and will facilitate the movement of equipment and supplies between the two buildings. The first floor connections will provide personnel access to the cafeteria and between buildings.

The new building has been designed to preserve the campus atmosphere and wooded environment of the site and to maintain the presence of the existing building as the Headquarters entrance. The new building is being built into the hillside west of the existing cafeteria. When finished, it will consist of two six-story office towers constructed of green-tinted glass curtain walls with horizontal and vertical divisions designed to be compatible with the existing Headquarters facade. The four-story atrium will contain an employee services concourse and four levels of outdoor planters which will recreate some of the lost greenery of the hill. The ground floor exterior base, which is being constructed of concrete to emulate the existing building, will contain building support functions. Entrance to the new building will be at the fourth floor level on the west side and adjacent to the new parking deck. Two escalators will expedite the movement of personnel between the fourth and first floors.

The courtyard space between the two buildings is designed to preserve the existing large trees near the cafeteria, and additional plantings, park benches, tables, and pathways will be provided to encourage use of this space by Agency employees. This courtyard will also provide a pleasant view from the existing cafeteria and the atrium of the new building.
